

A Free Android App that Helps Travelers to Reclaim Lost or Stolen Luggage

App-Order.com's Free Android App, "Save Your Booty," Provides its Users with an Inventory of Their Luggage

Describing their lost luggage, most people would say "It is black." Most of these people will never see their lost luggage returned to them.

App-Order.com's free Android app "Save Your Booty" is a phenomenal tool for people who are traveling. While packing their suitcase, users can scan the barcodes on the items in their bag and take pictures. Each item receives a timestamp and GPS location, verifying that the items described in a lost baggage report were, indeed, in the lost bag.

This process can help travelers who have lost their luggage, who have had items stolen out of their bag, or have misidentified their luggage and mistakenly taken someone else's suitcase. This makes the return of lost or stolen items more likely, as well as expediting the process of filing a claim after a long flight, when travelers are usually ready to get home or check into their hotel, rather than dealing with the headache of attempting to describe all of the items that were in their luggage to an airline official. Having pictures and accurate, easily accessible descriptions is of particular significance to international travelers, who are commonly left to deal with a communication gap in foreign countries.

Reclaiming lost luggage is not the only use for this highly versatile app. "Save Your Booty" can be used to catalogue collections, inventory belongings for insurance purposes, and help attorneys to better manage estate planning. "Save Your Booty" is an indispensable tool for travelers that will not only save its users' vacations; it will also save their sanity.
