

The Free Android App that Everyone Should Have As We Enter Springtime in Tornado Alley

App-Order.com's "Save Your Booty" App for Inventorying Items Prepares Tornado Alley Families for Tornado Damage

When a tornado hits, the damage can be immense. Most families are not prepared to file an insurance claim on the items that have been damaged. As a result, many people are not sufficiently refunded by their insurance companies because they are unable to provide them with accurate descriptions and estimates of worth for the items that have been damaged or destroyed.

With App-Order.com's free "Save Your Booty" app for Android, Tornado Alley families can protect themselves from incurring financial damages from tornadoes by inventorying the items in their household. The app allows its users to scan any item that has a barcode and store a picture, serial number, retail value, and current value at the touch of a finger.

Although insurance is one of the most common functionalities for "Save Your Booty," there are many others. Among them are: estate planning, collections, and creating a handheld Dewey Decimal System for home libraries.

The next time that a tornado hits, "Save Your Booty" will do just that for its users, ensuring that they get the maximum refund that they are eligible for from their insurance companies by providing them with exact, detailed information, as well as expediting the process. This highly functional, versatile, and indispensable app is completely free.
